Tearful NYPD Rookie Sorry for Giving Lieutenant a Holiday Party Lap Dance

By Matthew Chapman | 1 day ago

A New York cop who let his lieutenant's mouth a "No bite of a party" has offered a tearful apology for giving the boss a lap dance at a Christmas party. Officer Kaitlyn Kelly, a rookie who joined the force in 2020, was caught on video at a Staten Island bar in which Kelly's head is partially obscured by the mammary area of her Police Medal and has a video statement to TMZ. She said she was shocked by the dance and that she was "embarrassed and ashamed" of her actions. "I'm sorry to the NYPD. I'm sorry to the citizens of New York. I'm sorry to my family. I'm sorry to my friends. I'm sorry to everyone that's seen the [sic] video. I'm sorry to my lieutenant. I'm sorry to my sergeant. I'm sorry to my commanding officer. I shouldn't have done it. I shouldn't be employed. I'm sorry. I'm sorry. I'm sorry