

NATIONAL

A judge halted the removal of a Confederate memorial at Arlington National Cemetery

UPDATED DECEMBER 18, 2023 - 8:19 PM ET

Sarah McCammon

The removal of the Confederate Memorial in Section 16 of Arlington National Cemetery, in Arlington, Va., is on hold after a federal judge issued a temporary restraining order. U.S. Army photo by Elizabeth Frasier/Arlington National Cemetery

A federal judge on Monday issued a temporary injunction to stop the removal of a monument to Confederate soldiers on the grounds of Arlington National Cemetery.

Workers had began to remove the memorial on Monday before U.S. District Judge Rossie Alston Jr. issued his order, saying that the plaintiff's lawyer represented to the court that the project involved the disturbance of gravesites.

A group called Defend Arlington, affiliated with a group called Save Southern Heritage Florida, filed suit Sunday in federal court in Alexandria, Va. Alston set a hearing for Wednesday.

The removal, which was scheduled to be completed by the end of the week, comes in response to legislation passed by Congress, and amidst efforts in recent years to take down symbols honoring slaveholders and Confederate leaders.

In 2021, Congress passed a law requiring the Department of Defense to look at removing "names, symbols, displays, monuments, or paraphernalia" commemorating the Confederacy.

Arlington's Confederate Memorial offers a "mythologized vision of the Confederacy, including highly sanitized depictions of slavery," according to a report prepared by a commission set up in response to that legislation. The report notes that an inscription promotes the "Lost Cause" myth, "which romanticized the pre-Civil War South and denied the horrors of slavery."

RACE
Confederate monument melted down to create new, more inclusive public art

The monument, designed by sculptor Moses Ezekiel, was erected in 1914 with congressional approval at the cemetery located across the Potomac River from Washington, D.C.

University of Maryland historian Leslie Rowland told NPR and WBUR's Here and Now that funds for the memorial were raised by the United Daughters of the Confederacy, which existed largely to "vindicate Confederate soldiers and other members of the Confederate generation." They did so by "putting forward a sanitized, romanticized version of the pre-Civil War South," Rowland said.

Arlington National Cemetery had said that bronze pieces of the memorial would be removed, and its granite base would be left in place "to avoid disturbing surrounding graves." According to a press release issued before the court's order, the removal was to be finished by Dec. 22.

The plan to take down the monument has received pushback from some Republican leaders, including more than 40 members of Congress who've called for halting the removal. The Washington Post reported in September that Virginia Gov. Glenn Youngkin has asked the Virginia Military Institute to display the statue at a Civil War museum it operates.

confederate soldiers glenn youngkin virginia military institute confederate monument university of maryland arlington national cemetery civil war

Facebook Twitter Email

Sign up for NPR's Up First newsletter.
The news you need to start your day. Nothing more, never less.

See more subscription options

By subscribing, you acknowledge and agree to NPR's Terms of Use and Privacy Policy. NPR may share your name and email address with your NPR station. See Details.

More Stories From NPR

- FOOD

Gogl-mogl: old world home ((((((remedy)))))) that may comfort — even if it doesn't cure
- NATIONAL

Texas governor signs law making it a state crime to cross the border illegally
- HISTORY

A father and daughter went fishing. What they found was a 152-year-old shipwreck
- NATIONAL

Southwest will pay a $140 million fine for its meltdown during the 2022 holidays
- HEALTH

Oprah and WeightWatchers are now embracing weight loss drugs. Here's why
- NATIONAL

'Real MVP': A professor gives a shout out to the student who nods along in class

Popular on NPR.org

- POP CULTURE

Gen Z is suddenly obsessed with Snoopy — and not just because he's cute
- CLIMATE

People are leaving some neighborhoods because of floods, a new study finds
- ECONOMY

Inflation has cooled a lot. So why do things still feel so expensive?
- RELIGION

Pope Francis approves Catholic blessings for same-sex couples, but not for marriage
- NEWS

Up First briefing: Defense Secretary visits Israel; Southwest to pay $140 million fine
- MUSIC

Poll results: Listeners pick their favorite albums of 2023

NPR Editors' Picks

- HEALTH

When a quick telehealth visit yields multiple surprises beyond a big bill
- POLITICS

Sandra Day O'Connor's legacy extends far beyond the Supreme Court, her son says
- CULTURE

A look back at some of the biggest and weirdest auctions of 2023
- CULTURE

The best movies and TV of 2023, picked for you by NPR critics
- ON DISABILITIES

A controversial Census Bureau proposal could shrink the U.S. disability rate by 40%
- MIDDLE EAST

U.S. defense secretary presses Israeli officials on protecting civilian lives in Gaza

READ & LISTEN	CONNECT	ABOUT NPR	GET INVOLVED
Home	Newsletters	Overview	Support Public Radio
News	Facebook	Diversity	Sponsor NPR
Culture	Instagram	NPR Network	NPR Careers
Music	Press	Accessibility	NPR Shop
Podcasts & Shows	Public Editor	Ethics	NPR Events
	Corrections	Finances	NPR Extra
	Contact & Help		