

Russia to Send Only 15 Athletes to the Paris Olympics

Snake Baker July 27, 2024

Some people say it's still too much

It's sad for the athletes themselves.

But Russia and China and North Korea should just make their own Olympics that isn't gay and sickening.

I mean, do you all remember the satanic rituals they do at the Olympics?

Yesterday, they just did something with trannies mocking the Last Supper.

Who really wants to be a part of that?

Breitbart:

Russia's team for the 2024 Summer Olympic Games in Paris, France, consists of just 15 people — a massive fall from the 330 athletes Russia sent to the 2021 Tokyo Summer Games, thanks to the international fallout from Russia's brutal invasion of Ukraine.

International Olympic Committee sports director Kit McConnell said on Monday that only 15 athletes with Russian passports have registered for the Paris Games and they will only compete in ten events. The sizable Russian contingent at the 2021 Tokyo Games competed in more than 30 events and won 71 medals.

McConnell added that there was still time for more Russian athletes to register, but it seems unlikely that the final size of the Russian contingent would increase dramatically.

Russian officials have complained about the conditions set for their participation in the Paris Games, including bans on flying the Russian flag or playing the national anthem.

The IOC also banned any Russian athlete found to be "actively supporting" the invasion of Ukraine or serving in the Russian military.

Various Russian sports federations publicly stated they would not participate under those conditions. The Russian weightlifting federation, for example, cited the "unsportsmanlike selection principle" of its charter to cancel nine Olympic invitations that were initially accepted by its athletes. Russia's judo federation denounced the conditions set for participation as "humiliating" and rejected four invitations.

Russian state television networks announced last week that they will not broadcast the Olympics due to the conditions imposed on Russian athletes. The last time Russia blacked out the Olympics was during Moscow's 1984 boycott of the Los Angeles Games.

Russia's state news agency RIA Novosti complained on Monday that French officials have refused to accredit the five sports correspondents it wanted to send to the Paris Games. RIA Novosti claimed no reason was given for the denials.

French Acting Interior Minister Gerald Darmanin said threats of terrorism, espionage, and cybercrime were among the reasons for refusing thousands of accreditation requests.

Russia's vassal state Belarus has also dramatically reduced its Olympic representation, from 101 athletes at the Tokyo Games to 17 in Paris.

Russian and Belarusian athletes will be required to compete as "Individual Neutral Athletes" (or AIN, using its French acronym). Russia actually participated in several Olympic Games under comparable designations before the invasion of Ukraine, due to a string of doping scandals that turned Russia into a sports pariah. Russia's flag has not been raised at the Olympics, nor has its anthem been heard, since the 2016 Summer Games in Rio de Janeiro.

Yeah, they soft-banned them after the Crimea thing, which was not even a big deal.

If you take just the official numbers, Israel killed vastly more civilians per capita, in a much shorter time. No one is banning them.

The sad part is: the whole idea of the Olympics is that the people of the nations come together regardless of the conflicts between their governments for a peaceful competition.

It's sort of a nice idea, to show that while governments go to war with each other, the people are still able to get along and cooperate.

Maybe that was never true in the first place.

Anyway – if Russia is not allowed to show their flag or play their anthem, then why is Israel allowed to do that?
