Antiwhites Sacrifice Lives for their faith

Did they, from Titanic's Stern, to Our Strength? - an Ship Side?

BECKIE L.
JUN 20, 2023

1 2 Share

They fired the "50 year old White man" after he blew the whistle on how the submarine's design on construction flaws made the sub unsafe.

Today in the West, Antiwhitism is the State-sponsored religion.

If you want to fit in and be accepted in the right social circles, you have signal belief their creed of "white men bad - all others good."

Usually, believers in Antiwhitism sacrifice random Whites to their merciless gods. But this week, they "put their money where there mouth was" and gave us one martyrs in antiwhitism.

They sacrificed themselves in this ingenious coffin designed by an inspiring, "diverse" tenets:

They recorded their devotion to the true faith before giving their lives:

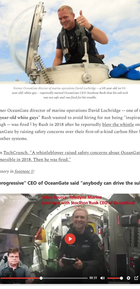
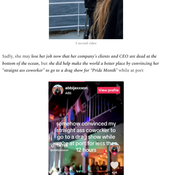
Brave, strong women captains, submersible pilots , engineers, innovators and thought leaders all worked together to make their martyrdom possible:



Screenshot, Photo "Thirty-Two" digitized domain, Tech Whites, Bots

They FIRED the "50 year old White guy" who blew the whistle on how design and construction flaws made their submarine unsafe:



Former OceanGate director of marine operations David Lochridge — a 58 year old (in 10 year old white guy — reportedly earned Thousands (10) Hundreds Bank that he said were not safe and fired for his trouble.

Former OceanGate director of marine operations David Lochridge — one of those "50-year-old white guys" Bush wanted to avoid hiring for not being "aspirational" enough — was fired 1 by Bush in 2018 after he reportedly blew the whistle on OceanGate for raising safety concerns over their first-of-a-kind carbon fiber hull and other systems.

From TechCrunch: "A whistleblower raised safety concerns about OceanGate's submersible in 2018. Then he was fired."

(full story in footnote 1)

The "progressive" CEO of OceanGate said "anybody can drive the sub" :

An Inspirational TikTok content creator and OceanGate Team Member

Made this selfie video as the sub went down for the last time:

Inspirational

Sadly, she may love her job now that her company's claims and CEO are dead at the bottom of the ocean, but she did help make the world a better place by convincing her "smugas ass coworker" to go to a drug show for "Pride Month" while at port:

Inspirational

Sadly, she may love her job now that her company's claims and CEO are dead at the bottom of the ocean, but she did help make the world a better place by convincing her "smugas ass coworker" to go to a drug show for "Pride Month" while at port:

I imagine she believes that convincing a "smugas ass" coworker to go to a drug show earned her points in "Woke Heaven".

In the case of OceanGate's, their antiwhitism appears to have been mostly expressed by getting rid of white men. White women were still celebrated and elevated...for the time being.

At least the OceanGate martyrs inspired good comics.

One of the harshest things for me about this is that good, competent, conscientious White men would build good companies composed of men of kindred blueprint to build high quality solutions, if only they were allowed to. It's how we got electricity, automobiles, airplanes, indoor plumbing. But now, with antiwhites in control of the levers of power in our once-great nations, competent Whites aren't allowed to form White companies. That would be against state religion of antiwhitism.

Do we need to restore the right of free association to Whites?

What do you think?

Thanks for reading Heroes and Villains! Subscribe for free to receive new posts and support my work.

Type your email... Subscribe

1 From TechCrunch: "A whistleblower raised safety concerns about OceanGate's submersible in 2018. Then he was fired."

> David Lochridge was terminated in January 2018 after presenting a scathing quality control report on the vessel to OceanGate's senior management, including founder and CEO Stockton Rush, who is on board the missing vessel.
>
> According to a court filing by Lochridge, the preamble to his report read: "Now is the time to properly address items that may pose a safety risk to personnel. Verbal communication of the key items I have addressed in my attached documents have been dismissed on several occasions, so I feel now I must make this report so there is an official record in place."
>
> The report detailed "numerous issues that posed serious safety concerns," according to the filing. These included Lochridge's worry that "visible flaws" in the carbon fiber supplied to OceanGate raised the risk of small flaws expanding into larger issues during "pressure cycling." These are the huge pressure changes that the submersible would experience as it descends to and ascends from the deep ocean floor. He noted that a previously tested scale model of the hull had "premature flaws."
>
> Carbon fiber composites can be stronger and lighter than steel, making a submersible naturally buoyant. But they can also be prone to sudden failure under stress. The hull that Lochridge was writing about was made by Spencer Composites, the only company to have previously made a carbon fiber hull for a manned submersible. (The submersible was commissioned by explorer Steve Fossett for a record-breaking dive, but he died in a light aircraft crash before it could be used.)
>
> Lochridge's recommendation was that non-destructive testing of the Titan's hull was necessary to ensure a "safe and safe product." The filing states that Lochridge was told that such testing was impossible, and that OceanGate would instead rely on its much touted acoustic monitoring system.
>
> The company claims this technology, developed in-house, uses acoustic sensors to listen for the tell-tale sounds of carbon fibers in the hull deteriorating to provide "early warning detection for the pilot with enough time to return the descent and safely return to surface."
>
> Lochridge, however, worried in the lawsuit that the system would not reveal flaws until the vessel was descending, and then might only provide "milliseconds" of warning before a catastrophic implosion.
>
> Rowell Mcduff, a veteran oceanographer and chairman of OceanGate's scientific and research foundation for three years, noted that contact with the Titan was lost on Sunday after only an hour and 45 minutes. "This suggests to me that they might have still been in the water column, descending to the Titanic," said McDuncreek in a phone interview.
>
> Lochridge also strongly encouraged OceanGate to have a classification agency, such as the American Bureau of Shipping, inspect and certify the Titan.
>
> A day after filing his report, Lochridge was summoned to a meeting with Rush and company's human resources, engineering and operations directors. There, the filing states, he was also informed that the manufacturer of the Titan's forward viewport would only certify it to a depth of 1,300 meters due to OceanGate's experimental design. The filing states that OceanGate refused to pay for the manufacturer to build a viewport that would meet the Titan's intended depth of 4,000 meters. The Titan's fan dives 1,800 meters below the surface.
>
> The filing also claims that hazardous flammable materials were being used within the submersible.
>
> At the end of the meeting, after saying that he would not authorize any manned tests of Titan without a scan of the hull, Lochridge was fired and escorted from the building.
>
> Lochridge, who claimed he was discharged in retaliation for being a whistleblower, made his filing after OceanGate sued him in federal court in Seattle the June. OceanGate has accused him of sharing confidential information with two individuals, as well as with the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA). In the lawsuit, OceanGate characterized Lochridge's report as false, and accused him of committing fraud by manufacturing a reason to be fired.

2 Anyone remember the Heaven's Gate Religion? Similar choice of name

Subscribe to Heroes and Villains

By Jeremie K. · Launched a year ago

News about Heroes and Villains - in support of the Good, The Beautiful, And The True

Type your email... Subscribe

5 Likes

1 2 Share

3 Comments

Write a comment...

Jeremie K. Jun 21 Author
Great follow-up story: https://hollywood.substack.com/p/oceangatetragedy

1 like Reply

Jeremie K. Jun 21 Author
A friend wrote: I'm thinking of a frame to describe this, maybe call it normalized antiwhitenism. The people living in a delusional fantasy world that think all of this western technology and society is separable from white men.
Maybe casual antiwhitenism.
That nothing matters and whites just have somewhat cause of skin color, that none of this is unique or special and can be done by any group of people. The entire mess isn't wasted mindset."

1 like Reply

3 more comments...

Top New Community

The Needle and the Damage Done
by Damien Copeland
MAY 26 · ARCHIVE 1

Celebrating the Small, Select Group that Withstood All of It
Dawson's Creek - The Amazing, Jaw-Dropping Journey Undertaken by John Cusack
JAN 26 · ARCHIVE 4

Resistance is Fertile! More Reasons We Will Prevail
by Jon-Erik Cat Lie Boy
AUG 26, 2022 · ARCHIVE 2

See all >

Ready for more?

Type your email... Subscribe

© 2023 Jeremie K. · Privacy · Terms · Collection notice

Start Writing Get the app

Substack is the home for great writing